PREFACE.

THE GLADSTONE LIBRARY at the National Liberal Club, one of the numerous memorials designed to record the services of the great Liberal statesman to his country, was planned during his lifetime, when the Club still occupied premises in Trafalgar Buildings, Northumberland Avenue. It was formally inaugurated by Mr. Gladstone himself on May 2nd, 1888, in the spacious room which has since borne the name. The original design of the memorial was that it should be a library of historical, political, and economic literature, open under certain conditions to the public. But as this arrangement would have deprived the members of the Club of a privilege which almost every Club possesses—the exclusive use of a quiet room for writing and study—it was, after consideration, abandoned as unworkable. As at present constituted, the Library discharges a double function, being both an ordinary Club library on a generous scale, and a special library for the studies above referred to. This fact explains its containing a number of standard works in general literature, as well as works that would only be looked for in a library of the special character as at first designed.

The inception of the Library was as follows:—On December 5th, 1883, at a meeting of the Committee of the Club, a resolution that it was desirable to form a special Library, in recognition of Mr. Gladstone's services to the country, was moved by Mr. John Noble, well known for his numerous and valuable contributions to Liberal political literature, and it was seconded by Professor James E. Thorold Rogers, at that time M.P. for Southwark. The motion was carried unanimously, and a Library Committee was formed, consisting of Mr. Blanchard Jerrold, Mr. Walter Wren, and the mover and seconder of the resolution, Mr. John Noble and Prof. Thorold Rogers, M.P. In 1885, Mr. W. Copeland Borlase, Mr. Sydney Kennedy, Mr. Herbert Gladstone, Mr. Hyde Clarke, and Mr. T. Fisher Unwin were added to the Committee, Mr. Borlase consenting to act temporarily as Honorary Librarian. In 1887 Mr. W. E. Bovill, Mr. E. J. Leveson, Professor T. W. Rhys Davids, Mr. F. W. Chesson, and Viscount Oxenbridge joined the Committee, and it was then agreed that a permanent Librarian should be appointed. In July of that year Mr. J. Y. W. Macalister, Librarian and Secretary of the Leeds Library, was first selected for this post; but on his accepting, almost immediately, the Librarianship of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society Mr. Arthur Wollaston Hutton, M.A., of Exeter College, Oxford, was appointed to fill his place, and he took up the duties on November 1st, 1887, and held the position until June 30th, 1899. At that date Mr. Francis George Haley, who had been Assistant Librarian for eight years, was appointed his successor; and at the same time Mr. (now Sir) Francis Carruthers Gould, at the unanimous request of the Committee, consented to act as Honorary Librarian ; and this arrangement has continued until the present time.

In the opening of the year 1888 a considerable sum of money was subscribed by members of the Club, and in spending it the Committee acted on the principle above referred to, that while the Library should be specially historical and political, it should also contain, as the Club Library, a collection of standard literature in all branches, and should be liberally provided with works of reference, and that further, in preference to editions of merely antiquarian interest, the books provided should be such as have been revised and brought up to date. A supply of the best works in current literature has throughout been secured by liberal subscriptions to circulating libraries.

At the time of the opening of the Library by Mr. Gladstone, on May 2nd, 1888, the following formed the Committee :—

ROGERS, Prof. J. E. THOROLD, Chairman.

AUBREY, W. H. S., LL.D.
BOVILL, W. E.
CHESSON, F. W.
DAVIDS, Prof. T. W. RHYS, LL.D.
GLADSTONE, HERBERT J., M.P.
GREEN, J. FREDERICK
GRIGSBY, W. E., LL.D.
HAMER, JOHN
KENNEDY, SYDNEY
LEVESON, E. J., F.R.G.S.
MCARTHUR, W. A., M.P.
OXENBRIDGE, Viscount
ROBERTSON, M., B.A., D.Sc.
UNWIN, T. FISHER
WREN, J. WALTER, M.A.

In the course of his speech in the Library on this occasion, Mr. Gladstone, referring to the economic maxim that in the long run "imports and exports are equal," illustrated from it the imperative duty of politicians to study:—"If you wish to treat political subjects in the manner in which they ought to be treated, if you wish to bring to them the knowledge by which they ought to be illustrated, if you wish to provide yourselves with all the instruments that will aid you in forming a sound judgment and in expressing it after it has been formed, depend upon it that can only effectually be done by combining study and reflection with the rapid and constant expression of ideas, which is our duty under the circumstances of our time, but which often becomes our snare. By imports I mean reading, by exports I mean speaking."

From the date of this speech donations to the Library, whether in books or in money, flowed in rapidly, and the names of Mr. George (now Lord) Armitstead, Mr. Sydney Kennedy, Sir James Kitson, and Mr. Anthony Rich may be mentioned as donors of £100 each. In June, 1888, the Library contained about 3,500 bound volumes and about an equal number of unbound pamphlets. The collection of pamphlets, most of them political and many of them rare, was from the first a special feature in the Gladstone Library. The nucleus was formed by Mr. A. W. W. King, who presented a large number which his father, Mr. P. S. King, had accumulated, and these were added to by the representatives of Mr. James Beal and Mr. Charles Bradlaugh. The collection, growing thus rapidly from donations, contained a number of duplicates, and upwards of a thousand of these were presented to the trustees of the British Museum, who, in their annual report, officially thanked the Gladstone Library Committee for numerous items that previously had not found a place in the national collection. Although the pamphlet is now somewhat out of date as a political force, its place being supplied by articles in the Reviews and Magazines, many of the older ones are of great value to the historical student, and this is true of a large number of those contained in the Gladstone Library.

Every year since the foundation of the Library the Club has spent money on the purchase of books, and from time to time special funds have been devoted to the same purpose. Thus, after the death of James E. Thorold Rogers (October 12th, 1890), a collection of Greek and Latin classics was purchased with a portion of the sum that was subscribed for a memorial. And on the death of Mr. Gladstone (May 19th, 1898) a special Memorial Fund, amounting to £1,365, was subscribed, and this is still in process of being expended on books. From a similar fund, amounting to £1,172, subscribed on the death of Sir William Harcourt (October 1st, 1904), the Committee voted £100 for the purchase of books dealing with Law and Constitutional History; and in 1902 Mr. Leonard Courtney presented, on behalf of the "William Clarke Memorial Committee," 432 volumes from the valuable collection that Mr. Clarke himself had made.

There have been only three elected Chairmen of the Library Committee: first, as noted above, Prof. James E. Thorold Rogers (1883-90); then Viscount Oxenbridge (1890-2); and finally Dr.

C. D. Ginsburg, who was first formally elected in 1893, and since then has held the position continuously for more than fourteen years. The "Father" of the Committee is Mr. T. Fisher Unwin, who has been a member of it, without break, since 1885.

From the first the Library has been constantly used for writing as well as for reading, and many authors, and journalists, and statisticians have borne witness to the great value of its contents. It should be also placed on record as a matter of general public interest that many of the earlier of "F. C. G.'s" famous political cartoons were drawn in the Gladstone Library.

At this date (November, 1907) the Library contains 24,460 bound volumes, and 20,152 unbound pamphlets.

The Catalogue contained in this volume, so far as concerns Authors and Titles, is based on work done by Mr. A. W. Hutton during the first twelve years of the Library's existence, but it has been throughout revised and brought down to date by his successor, Mr. F. G. Haley. The elaborate Subject Catalogue has been compiled within the last two years, and is exclusively the work of the latter.
